Soap and Water

The enemy of healing is infection. The germs living on equipment and tools generally do not cause disease; the risk is from bacteria already on skin. A wound allows skin germs to reach the more vulnerable tissue beneath the skin. The problem gets worse if there is dirt, sawdust, debris, or dead tissue in the wound.

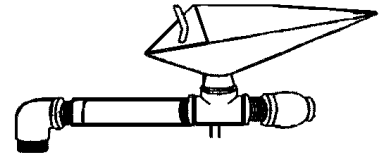

The most effective treatment for all wounds is immediate washing with soap and clean water. (If you know you need to go to the emergency room, skip this step.) Washing drastically reduces the number of germs, and takes away dirt and debris where bacteria can hide and multiply.
